Rebellion Without Rehearsal

Rebellion Without Rehearsal is an expansion compatible with Netrunner, the asymmetric competitive card game. In this pack you will find 3 new identities, plus 186 cards (3 copies each of 62 different cards).

Play as Runners, diverse hackers fighting for a cause or personal interests during a time of turmoil and unrest, or as Corps advancing their hidden agendas to exploit an opportunity they did not anticipate.

The flames of rebellion rage unquenched

In the months following the events of The Automata Initiative, the upheaval within Brazil has accelerated at a blistering pace. Protesters gather daily across the country, many becoming violent as they clash with police equipped by Thunderbolt Armaments, HB's most prominent division in the region. The assassinations of a high-profile anti-android senator and the president of the Supreme Federal Court stir up questions regarding the stability of the government, culminating in an attempted coup by the Brazilian military, quietly backed by Weyland subsidiary Nuvem SA.

Now that tensions have become open conflict, the spotlights turn to Sebastião Souza Pessoa, prominent activist organizer and underworld runner, and Epiphany Analytica's "Holo Man", the mastermind behind the entire crisis.

What's Inside

Rebellion Without Rehearsal contains 189 playable cards, all designed to work seamlessly with Netrunner, including three unique identities.

New Concept: Threat

Alongside the increasing conflict between corporate interests and Runner resistance, the stakes have only grown higher. When the deadly game between Runner and Corp escalates, contingencies and backup plans are set in motion. A veritable arms race begins as the threat posed by each side builds up; tensions break into hostility, and sometimes outright war.

How Threat Works

The threat level is the greatest number of agenda points in any player's score area. For example, if the Runner has 4 agenda points and the Corp has 3 agenda points, the threat level is 4.

Threat abilities are marked with a new ability flag, "Threat N →", and are only active if the threat level is equal to or greater than the given number N. If the threat level is less than N, the corresponding ability is inactive and cannot be triggered or applied to the game state.

Sebastião Souza Pessoa

At two months of age, Sebastião was a gravely ill baby. Unable to afford the treatment he needed, his parents turned to a Jinteki program seeking children for human trials of a new gene therapy that would radically improve his immune system.

This proved to be a monkey's paw that would curl twenty-six years later when, after a sickness-free life, Seb developed a degenerative disease that quickly rendered him unable to move his legs. As a single father, a political analyst whose work took him across the country, and an avid social activist since his university years, Seb had walked on the front lines of every protest he could, carrying his young daughter Luciana on occasion. Even as he swiftly took to using a wheelchair, he found his old reality incompatible with his new one.

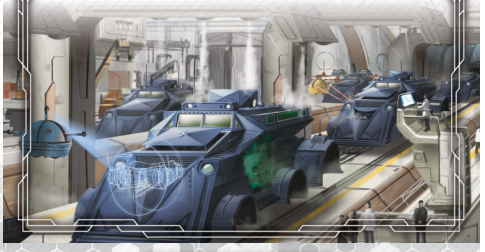

Faced with the loss of his job and new medical needs, Sebastião turned to those whom he knew he could rely on: his friends, family, and community. An uncle built his wheelchair from salvage, neighbors cared for Luciana as he worked the underworld jobs he could find, and when, four years later, he met Eru Ayase, rogue clone and second love of his life, his activist contacts did everything they could to smooth his and Luciana's relocation to Brasília to be with her.

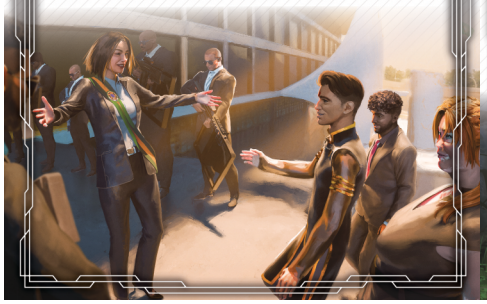

With the life he has lived, who could be surprised by his response to the Automata Initiative? Seb is a man both eloquent and filled with rage at the megacorps who control the world. And as a beloved organizer of people young and old, rich and poor, with the means to pressure the powers that be from both meatspace and netspace, Sebastião is a waking nightmare for megacorps and corrupt politicians alike.

Thunderbolt Armaments

"But we can't risk another Brazil" is a phrase that immediately cancels projects and ends conversations in HB offices worldwide. Brazil's offer of welcome, asylum and equality to escaped bioroids is a problem even HB's best strategists can't solve. Unlike Jinteki, HB chose not to be secretive about their presence in Brazil: Thunderbolt Armaments is a highly successful weapons manufacturer, renowned for innovation. Their R&D department, based at the Lightning Laboratory, is so heavily protected that you can almost see the ice even without jacking in.

When the Thunderbolt CEO struck up a friendship with President Tavares, HB's strategists went into overdrive. Contracts for hardening Federal District infrastructure and weapons upgrades for all Federal Police followed. Then, finally, the moment HB was waiting for: President Tavares used her majority to push the Automata Initiative all the way through Congress. Only her signature is needed before Brazil rejoins the rest of the world in classifying bioroids as machines.

Nuvem SA

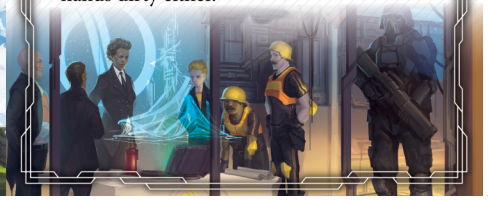

Nuvem SA is interested in two things: real estate and real power. As part of the Nuvem Group, a collection of Weyland land acquisition corporations in South America, Nuvem SA is focused on the buying and selling of properties in Brazil to be sold to other companies for deforestation, strip mining, gentrification… you name it.

Of course, with the deed to the land comes the constitutional right to defend it – Weyland paramilitary forces are given government license to "protect" their land from undesirable trespassers. And with so much property to defend, those forces are quite large indeed...

Teresa Braganza is no stranger to chaos. She served two tours on Mars with the Brazilian military, and a decade of senior prisec work at Argus before being promoted to CEO of Nuvem SA. But it was one thing seeing battlefields abroad. Seeing it here, in her home country, sickens her.

Her higher-ups in Weyland are none too happy about it either. Unstable countries so close to Jack's Beanstalk make them nervous. Braganza is happy to put her military contacts to good use, supporting a coup to remove the political pawns of the other corporations from the Brazilian government. She'd prefer it to be a bloodless move, but she's not afraid of getting her hands dirty either.
